Hudson Police Detectives take part in the Special Olympics Super Plunge on March 4th.

On March 4th Detective Alan Marcotte and Steve McElhinney traveled to Rhode Island to take part in the Special Olympics Super Plunge. The Super Plunge is a 24 hour event where officers and other supporters of the Special Olympics plunge into the ocean once and hour for 24 hours. During this event the weather was extremely cold and at its coldest point the air felt like minus 14 degrees. The two detectives were the only representatives from New Hampshire law enforcement that attended this grueling event. On March 11th both Dets. Marcotte and McElhinney joined a large contingent of Hudson Police Officers and officers from many other departments at the Winni Dip. The total amount raised by the officers of the Hudson Police Department for Special Olympics this year is $15,600. The following link is a short video profiling the 2017 Super Plunge in Rhode Island.
